ABSTRACT

5

The present invention provides novel methods for determining whether a cell has incorporated a polynucleotide comprising the use of organophosphate hydrolase activity as a marker which has both selectable and screenable properties.